Explanatory documentation for the Application form: Parent does not qualify for Childcare tax refunds, municipality Hilversum

What is a proof of income statement (was IB60)?

A proof of income statement (was IB60) is in fact meant to inform other (governmental) agencies who do not have direct access to citizen income information. An example of such an agency is a housing association needing further income information to be able to determine if someone qualifies for a subsidized rental property. If a taxpayer requires information about whether or not they qualify for an income dependent governmental subsidy, then they will request a tax payer's proof of income statement. The taxpayer can, in this case, request a proof of income statement IB60. The proof of income statement must be requested for the parent without income, but they do need to, eventually via their partner, submit a declaration.

The proof of income statement that you will receive from tax services will take into account some tax deductions such as, for example, for a mortgage.

If you have not issued a declaration of income taxes and therefore cannot receive a proof of income declaration statement IB60, you may still choose to do so to obtain a proof of income declaration statement. You may also submit a declaration of income taxes from the previous calendar year including all of your employers and/or welfare organizations.

Municipality rules and regulations for toddler playgroups

A parent who does not qualify for childcare tax refunds under article 1.1 of the Childcare Law and Regulations for Toddler playgroups, can, when making use of a playgroup, qualify under municipality regulations. The parent will need to submit the Application form: Parent does not qualify for Childcare tax refunds, municipality Hilversum and a recent proof of income statement to their toddler playgroup organization and their municipality to prove that they do not qualify for childcare tax refunds.

A requirement is that you have submitted your income tax declaration.

It is not always the case that a proof of income statement excludes employment income, such as welfare benefit payments. In this case, it is required that you submit additional proof that you do receive income from welfare benefit payments, but not from employment.

The total family income will determine the amount of the parental contribution.

The municipality will pay the contribution directly to the organization so that the parent(s) will pay a lower rate to their toddler playgroup organization.

What are childcare tax refunds?

Childcare tax refunds are intended for parents who combine taking care of children with employment, are following a program to help them find employment, or are studying. It is a contribution for childcare from tax services.

You qualify for childcare tax refunds if:

- Both parents of one family are employed, or if a parent/parents are studying or following a program to help them find employment;
- A single parent/caregiver who is employed, is following a program to find employment or is studying.
- If a parent/parents are following a citizenship course.

You may request if you qualify for childcare tax services by contacting tax services, "Belastingdienst" at www.belastingdienst.nl. It is also possible to do a calculation of estimated costs on this website.

Childcare tax refunds for self-employed parents/parent

Self-employed parents/parent qualify for childcare tax refunds under the Childcare Law and Regulations for toddler playgroups, including the parent who performs work without payment for their partner's company as conform to article 3.78 of the Income Tax Laws and Regulations 2001. This article applies to the tax deduction for a partner who performs work without payment in their partner's company if the partner works for more than 525 hours per year. If the husband has his own company and his wife works for this company for more than 525 hours per year, then they both qualify for childcare income tax refunds. They, therefore, have a right to receive childcare income tax refunds and do not qualify under the "municipality regulations".
